

INSTRUCTOR DEVELOPMENT

Netflix CEO Reed Hastings once said his biggest competitors are Facebook, YouTube, and sleep. As instructors, we have the same competitors, and many others. In this era of constant distraction, instructors must develop innovative practices to assure their students are learning concepts in a manner that will positively affect behavior.

In regard to law enforcement, the public demands that police leaders provide a professionally trained police force. Regardless of topic, how training is delivered will have the most impact on learning and retention.

The heart of all training is a good instructor. Merely reading PowerPoint slides is not the answer! Students will learn to utilize multiple teaching techniques including lecture, leading discussions, facilitating group work, and hands on activities. This course will give learners the skills and confidence to succeed in the classroom.

Throughout the course of this instruction, students will:

- Understand the key components to effective public speaking
- List the different teaching techniques and their effective uses
- Identify the myths associated with different learning styles
- Demonstrate effective teaching principles by giving a short in-class presentations
- Discuss common teaching pitfalls and how to avoid them
